Fort Jackson honors those who have fallen

Post Headquarters was the site Monday for Fort Jackson's annual Memorial Day ceremony, hosted by the 171st Infantry Brigade. The observance was filled with music from the 282nd Army "Victory" Band and included a 21-gun salute and a rendition of "Amazing Grace" by Sgt. 1st Class Clarice Lockhart.

Attended by Soldiers, veterans and civilians, the ceremony offered a chance to remember and honor the more than 650,000 service members who have given their lives in wars and conflicts dating back to the American Revolution.

"I'm proud you have joined me today, because we have specifically set aside time to remember those who have made the ultimate sacrifice," Brig. Gen. James H. Schwitters, Fort Jackson commanding general, told those in attendance. "I ask you to join me as we pay respects to our forebears and those who we have lived and worked with, who have paid that ultimate price."

An act of Congress declared Memorial Day a national holiday in 1971.

In a tribute to the American Soldier, Soldiers dressed in period uniforms representative of different wars marched forward while a brief history of each conflict was read. The Memorial Day ceremony also honored the Society of Military Widows and the Gold Star Wives.

Eugene Johnson, a 26-year Army veteran, attended the Fort Jackson ceremony, as well as two other Memorial Day ceremonies Monday. Johnson was wounded in Vietnam and is a member of Columbia's Chapter 402 of the Military Order of the Purple Heart, and said he always remembers that some never made it back.

"I lost a few men in Vietnam, so Memorial Day is always special to me," he said. "As servicemen, we happen to be the fortunate ones. We need to remember those who died and always be forever grateful to them. The young people are making the sacrifices today and it's important for us to be there. I can't forget and say it doesn't matter to me, because it does matter."

Post commissary named best in outreach to Reserve, Guard Soldiers

The Fort Jackson Commissary was honored recently by the Defense Commissary Agency for outstanding outreach that stemmed from an offsite case-lot sale last fall at the Donaldson Reserve Center in Greenville, S.C.

The Fort Jackson Commissary has been recognized for outstanding outreach to Army National Guard and Reserve Soldiers.

Defense Commissary Agency officials recognized the installation during the agency's 2007 conference and training event last month in Richmond, Va.

Employees at the Fort Jackson Commissary conducted an offsite case lot sale last fall at the Donaldson Reserve Center in Greenville, S.C., reaching more than 6,500 Guard and Reserve personnel in the area who would have had to travel more than two hours to shop at the commissary.

"Instead of letting the sales come to us, we were proactive and were able to rack up $135,000 in sales," said Glennie Scott, commissary director. "There are a lot of Reserve and Guard Soldiers in that area and they were really able to benefit from the sale."

Each year, for the past four years, DeCA has held an outreach challenge in which commissaries compete for most originality and creativity in marketing the benefit. The challenge encourages commissaries to reach out to authorized shoppers who may not be using their commissary benefit, or who may not be using it regularly, and provides a unique opportunity for store directors worldwide to share their best outreach practices with others and to strengthen the commissary benefit.

This year's theme was "Guerrilla Marketing and Outreach: Maximizing Impact," which emphasizes a targeted approach to outreach and marketing to military families, spouses and retirees, with a special focus on key demographic groups such as

Updated blogging regs mind-boggling to some

Mike A. Glasch
Leader Staff

A recent update to the AR 530-1 (Operations Security) isn't as restrictive as first thought when it comes to blogging.

The regulation was updated April 19 and requires Soldiers, Army civilians and contractors to consult with their immediate supervisor and operational security officer for a review before using information in a public forum. This includes, but is not limited to, Web log (blog) postings, discussions on Internet message and forum boards and Web site postings. It specifically prohibits posting images of roadside bomb attacks, images of troops killed in action and any pictures of installation security messages.

When the updated regulation was released, there were concerns that any information a Soldier puts on the Internet would be reviewed with a fine-tooth comb. The Army has since clarified some of the confusing language.

A fact sheet released two weeks after the updated regulation was published stated, "... the wording and policies on blogging remain the same from the July 2005 guidance first put out by the U.S. Army in Iraq for battlefield blogging. Since not every post/update in a public forum can be monitored, this regulation places trust in the Soldier, civilian employee, family member and contractor that they will use proper judgment to ensure OPSEC."

Since 2005, when Soldiers have wanted to publish military-related content in a public forum, they have been required to report their wishes to their immediate supervisor and OPSEC officer.

The updated regulation does put more responsibility on commanders. It requires that they ensure any information released receive an OPSEC review — including any Internet posting by subordinates. It also states that units should conduct quarterly reviews of Web sites to ensure that "the content remains relevant and appropriate."

However, the Army fact sheet states, "In no way will every blog post/update a Soldier makes on his or her blog need to be monitored or first approved by an immediate supervisor and Operations Security (OPSEC) officer. After receiving guidance and awareness training from the appointed OPSEC officer, that Soldier blogger is entrusted to practice OPSEC when posting in a public forum."

If a Soldier wants to create a blog, his or her immediate supervisor and OPSEC officer should be informed for two primary reasons:

- To provide the command situational awareness.
- To allow the OPSEC officer an opportunity to explain to the Soldier matters to be aware of when posting military-related content in a public, global forum.

Soldiers may have a blog without needing to consult with their immediate supervisor and OPSEC officer under certain conditions:

- The blog's topic is not military-related.
- The Soldier doesn't represent or act on behalf of the Army in any way.
- The Soldier doesn't use government equipment when on his or her personal blog.

Pace: Iraqis must step up to governance challenge

Jim Garamone
American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — The Iraqi government needs to step forward to make progress in governance and revitalize the economy, the chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff said Monday during appearances on various morning television talk shows.

Marine Gen. Peter Pace also used the television appearances to thank service members and their families on Memorial Day.

"It is very difficult to talk about numbers of those who have died in combat, but the fact of the matter is that freedom is not free," Pace said on NBC's Today. "We must protect our freedoms at home and abroad, and the men and women in uniform today understand how important their service is. This is not an easy fight, but they understand its value and importance to our nation."

On CBS This Morning, Pace said that American service members serving in Iraq understand they are buying time for the Iraqi government to set its house in order. "It is time for the Iraqi government to stand up to lead, to pull their people together, to make it so we can do what we would like us to do and they would like us to do: come home," Pace said.

The Iraqi security forces are increasing and the readiness rates are going up. "But their leadership is going to have to show that they can pull together a unity government and lead their people," he said.

The general wants the Iraqi government to emulate the Sunni sheikhs of Al Anbar province. A year ago, the outlook in the province was bleak, he said. But tribal leaders and sheikhs saw the carnage that al Qaeda in Iraq was inflicting on the country and they joined coalition forces and Iraqi security forces to drive the terrorists from the region.

"The example has been set in al Anbar by Sunni sheikhs who last year were fighting against us and their own government," Pace said. "It's a great example for the central government in Iraq to pull people together."

The enemy in the war on terror is a bloodthirsty one with a 100-year plan. The general said that coalition forces found an al Qaeda torture chamber in Diyala province and freed 41 Iraqis.

"We are up against a very ruthless enemy and this nation is going to have to defend itself for as long as it takes," he said.

Pace said he sees the enemy increasing attacks over the next few months as Americans debate the war and the surge. In part, they will increase attacks to affect the debate inside the United States. Ryan Crocker, U.S. ambassador to Iraq, and Army Gen. David Petraeus, Multinational Force Iraq commander, will issue an assessment in September as to the way forward.

"We will see the enemy in July and August try to increase our casualties," Pace said. "That said, there has been progress."

Planning goes forward across the spectrum for future operations in Iraq.

"You would expect us to be looking forward and planning ways to ramp up or ramp down depending on the situation on the ground," Pace said.

He said the assessment in September will inform leaders on the next steps in the country. "We're looking at an entire spectrum of 'next steps' to either reinforce success or make changes that may be necessary," he said.

The chairman said that when he visits troops, he often gets asked if the American people still support them.

"Americans do understand the sacrifices that have been made over 232 years to let us live free," Pace said. "They are reaching out in very special ways today to the men and women in uniform. I was in Charlotte, N.C., yesterday for the NASCAR race. (There were) 180,000 fans at the Lowe's Motor Speedway who were on their feet cheering and screaming for the troops that were there."

"I think America has found a special way regardless of their feelings about the war to reach out and say thank you to those serving today," Pace said.

On Memorial Day, Pace, a Vietnam combat veteran, said he has "some names in my head that I've carried for almost 40 years. They are very special to me, I think all of us who have served in combat have names like that. They remind of the sacrifice that's required for the nation to live free. They remind me of my very special responsibilities to those who are serving today to ensure as best I can, that we have as little sacrifice as possible, but as much as required to keep us free."

Latest Chinook, Lakota tested

Kelly Patrice Pate
Army News Service

FORT HOOD, Texas — Two teams from the Army Operational Test Command here traveled to Fort Campbell, Ky., and Barstow, Calif., to test two new helicopters.

At Fort Campbell, a test team of Soldiers, Army civilians and contractors linked up with local Army pilots to perform more than 60 hours of flight tests on the Army's CH-47F Chinook, a cargo helicopter recognizable by its long fuselage and twin tandem rotors.

"It was like giving a kid a computer for the first time," said Chief Warrant Officer 4 Tom Miskowiec, Company B, 7th Battalion, 101st Aviation Regiment. He said the upgrade in the cockpit from an analog to digital, multifunctional display computer with tactical Internet capability has changed almost everything with regard to how chopper pilots see their world.

The new onboard equipment with digital maps and imagery coordinates with a tracking system on the ground, according to Miskowiec, who flew the older model CH-47D Chinook in Iraq in 2005. "You can literally look at a satellite photo of where you are over the ground, and where you need to go in relation to the flight plan," he said.

After performing engine maintenance, Miskowiec took the Chinook on a test flight in preparation for the mission later in the evening — transporting a High Mobility Multipurpose Wheeled Vehicle while using night-vision goggles.

Following the flight, Miskowiec said the crew inside the new Chinook has more situational awareness than ever before.

"The crew can determine from the display units the positions of other players on the battlefield, including ground forces, air elements, geography and other structures," he said.

He also emphasized that while the Chinook is all about moving external or internal loads and mass casualties, as well as conducting combat assaults, in the end every mission is about people.

As the Chinook was being put to the test, at Barstow in the Mohave Desert, another OTC team rehearsed in advance of its test mission on the Army's newest Huey, the UH-72A Lakota, a light utility helicopter.

The Army's acquisition of this new version Lakota could free up the UH-60 Blackhawk for use in Iraq and Afghanistan. The intent is for the Lakota to aid in homeland security, disaster relief and law enforcement support, including counter drug operations.

Capable of carrying six passengers or two medical litters side-by-side, the Lakota is equipped with a side-mounted hoist apparatus and has the ability to maintain a stabilized hover. Its use will be mostly for medical evacuation and other transport missions.

"This is a fantastic helicopter compared to what I'm used to flying, that 35-year-old legacy from Vietnam, the OH 58-A-C," said Chief Warrant Officer 4 Michael Chaiko, a New Jersey Army National Guard instructor pilot. "I'm doing things I've never done before because I didn't have the capabilities that a hoist and sling offer. The helicopter I've been flying for the last 12 years could barely lift off with three people aboard."

After flying a test mission, Chaiko said he was impressed with the new technology and responsiveness of the Lakota.

"The unique rotor system provides directional control," he explained. "It flies better than the pilot in a lot of cases."

young, single service members as well as the Guard and Reserve.

The theme encouraged commissary employees to think nontraditional in their approach to outreach, in a time of tight budgets and time constraints, said Scott Simpson, DeCA's chief operating officer.

"We're always struggling to deliver more commissary benefit for less money," Simpson said. "So the idea of guerrilla marketing — using limited resources for maximum impact — was a great theme for the competition and a great philosophy for the agency as a whole."

"I am proud of the hard work of everyone involved in this competition," he said. "Congratulations to the winning stores."

Commissaries entering the competition submitted packages that documented their best outreach efforts over the previous year. Entries were judged on originality and creativity of outreach strategy, effectiveness in reaching intended audiences and result.

Other winning commissaries were Fort Hood, Texas, for best outreach to retirees; Sheppard Air Force Base, Texas, for best outreach to new recruits; Nellis Air Force Base, Nev., for best outreach to young enlisted service members; Fort Campbell, Ky., for best outreach to military families; Misawa Air Base, Japan, for best outreach to young enlisted service members overseas; and Ramstein Air Base, Germany, for best outreach to military families overseas.

Well-Being Corner

Triage at UCC; daycare wait lists

Tanya Brown
AFAP Coordinator

Today's article will focus on issues resulting from the recent Army Family Action Plan Conference and Community FIRST/AFAP second quarter fiscal year 2007. These issues were answered by Moncrief Army Community Hospital and the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation.

The first issue, brought up by a community member, was about not being triaged in a timely manner at the Urgent Care Clinic. The community member observed patients waiting long periods of time without being triaged. The community member recommends the following: 1) Provide immediate vital/triage screening upon arrival for all patients; and 2) Determine if on-site referral is necessary, and give option to use other care.

MACH responded that an initial assessment is provided to all patients who come to the UCC. Patients who need immediate treatment are provided immediate triage and treatment. Patients who have non-urgent needs are triaged after patients with urgent medical problems. Non-urgent patients are generally triaged within 10 minutes.

The front desk clerks inform patients they have the option to receive treatment downtown from a TRICARE provider during high-volume and long-wait periods. This information is also provided through TRICARE literature.

The second issue was that the child development centers on Fort Jackson are often full, leading those who seek child care to be put on a wait list. This affects the Fort Jackson community-at-large.

The recommendation is to build a daycare center that can accommodate more children.

MWR responded that the Scales Avenue CDC and Family Child Care program provide full-day and part-day child care for the Fort Jackson community. They said that until recently, there has not been an immediate demand waiting list for care. The only waiting list for care at the current time is for full-day and part-day care for children younger than 2 years old.

Recruitment for Family Child Care providers is ongoing to try and eliminate the waiting list for care for children under 2. If, however, the demand for care increases beyond the current capability, CYS management staff will pursue additional space for kindergarten-age children and convert the space in the CDC to provide care for younger children or initiate paperwork to request an additional child care facility for the Fort Jackson community. The Hood Street CDC and FCC program provide hourly child care for the Fort Jackson community. Within the last few months, Hood Street CDC has been unable to accept reservations for all available spaces because of a staffing shortage.

This situation should be resolved within the next six to eight weeks. However, there may still be peak periods of time when it is difficult to get a reservation. For example, the prime hours requested are from 9 a.m. to noon, and the busiest day is Thursday. CYS staff is now monitoring the number of individuals who cannot receive reservations for their desired time and date to document the demand and look at other ways of meeting the need for care at peak times.

In the meantime, the Hood Street CDC staff will continue to refer parents to one of the four FCC homes that provides hourly care and to the Scales Avenue CDC for care in vacant full-day or part-day spaces. Parents can help by scheduling activities for non-peak times and days, when possible.

As a reminder issues can be submitted through the Well-Being home page or Community FIRST/AFAP Interactive Customer Evaluation link, whether it affects here at Fort Jackson or throughout the Army; feedback is important. Help us help the community by submitting issues and recommendations online at <http://www.jackson.army.mil/WellBeing/wellbeing.htm>. #### ICE Appreciation

The garrison would like to congratulate the Directorate of Morale, Welfare and Recreation's Army Community Services Division, specifically the ACS Financial Readiness Program and Moncrief Army Community Hospital, specifically the MRI Services. They have both achieved a perfect 5.0 percent rating in employee/staff attitude out of a possible 5.0, for a 12-week period. These are outstanding performances in customer satisfaction. ### Safety Spotlight

Toddler drownings happen quickly, quietly

Consumer Product Safety Commission

Following the opening of many private and public pools this Memorial Day weekend, the Consumer Product Safety Commission is advising that homeowners and parents use layers of protection around the pool year-round to prevent children from becoming a drowning victim. Each year, there are about 260 drowning deaths of children younger than 5 in swimming pools, and an estimated 2,725 children are treated in hospital emergency rooms for pool submersion injuries — mostly in residential pools.

CPSC Chairman Nancy Nord says, "Parents may think that if their child falls in the water, they will hear lots of splashing and screaming, and that they will be able to come to the rescue. Many times, however, children slip under the water silently. Even people near the pool often report hearing nothing out of the ordinary."

To reduce the risk of drowning, CPSC recommends adopting layers of protection, including physical barriers, such as a fence with self-closing, self-latching gates completely surrounding pools, to prevent unsupervised access by young children. If the pool is accessible from the house, use alarms on doors or a power safety cover over the pool. It is important to always be prepared for an emergency by having rescue equipment and a phone near the pool. Also, all parents who own pools should learn cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

There is also a growing danger with inflatable or portable pools, which range in size from small kiddie pools to pools up to 4-feet deep and 18-feet wide. Between 2004 and 2006, CPSC received 47 reports of deaths of children related to inflatable pools. Large inflatable pools are relatively inexpensive — large pools with water filters can cost under $200. These pools are often purchased by consumers without considering the barriers, such as fencing and covers, necessary to protect young children.

In addition to barriers and constant supervision, CPSC offers these tips to help prevent drowning deaths:

- Since every second counts, always look for a missing child in the pool first. Precious time is often wasted looking for missing children anywhere but in the pool.
- Don't leave toys and floats in the pool that can attract young children and cause them to fall in the water when they reach for the items.
- For above-ground and inflatable pools with ladders, remove or secure the ladder when the pool is not in use.
- Even if children can swim, it doesn't make them drown-proof. Supervise children using the pool.

CPSC's Web site has downloadable safety posters for both full-size and inflatable pools, visit www.cpsc.gov/nsn/nsnposter.html, publications which can be ordered free of charge at www.cpsc.gov/cpsc/pub/pubs/chdrown.html and a new public service announcement at www.cpsc.gov/cpsc/pub/prerel/prhtml07/07195.html.

Veterans pay tribute on Vietnam Wall's 25th anniversary

John J. Kruzal

American Forces Press Service

WASHINGTON — About 2,000 veterans, former and current military personnel, families and other spectators marked the 25th anniversary of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial here Monday during the annual Memorial Day Observance.

For a quarter of a century, family members, friends and cohorts have solemnly filed past the memorial commonly known as “The Wall,” seeking their loved ones among the 58,000 names of the fallen etched on the black granite panels.

“I think this is place where people feel very comfortable and they really become a part of the memorial by getting closer to it,” said Jan C. Scruggs, founder and president of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund, and today’s master of ceremonies.

“It’s a good place for events that are patriotic and thoughtful in nature, and I think the spirits of the soldiers on the wall are probably always there for everybody,” he said.

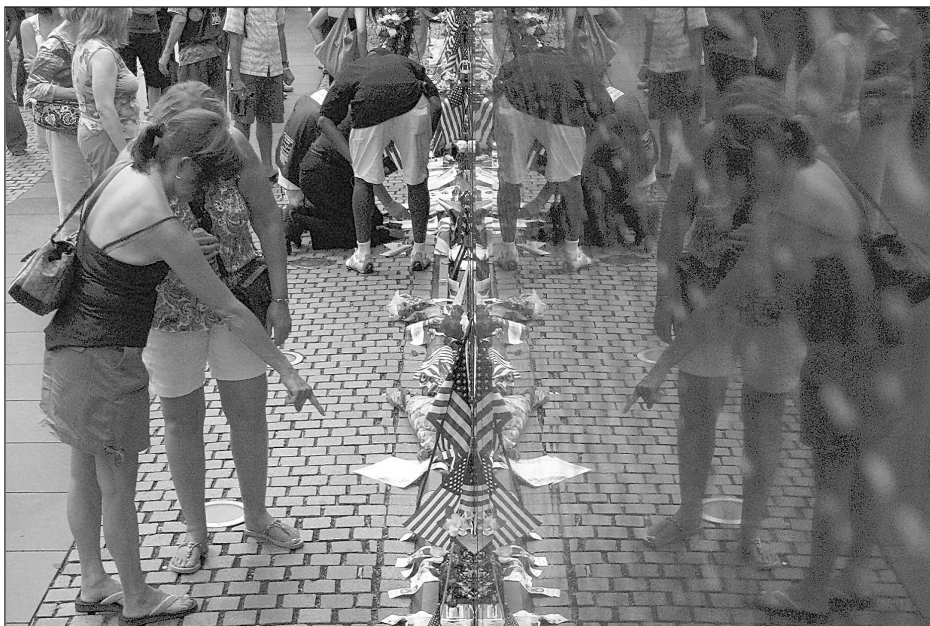

Three names were added to the wall recently, he noted, bringing the total to 58,256. Family members read the names of Navy Fireman Apprentice Joseph Gerald Krywicki of Holton, Mich.; Army Sgt. Richard Monroe Pruett of San Diego, Calif.; and Army Spc. Wesley Alvin Stiverson of Monticello, Ill.

“The past is part of the present and part of the future as well,” he said, “so when it comes to military service, remembering those who have gone before is a part of honoring those who are serving us today.”

Scruggs paid tribute to veterans of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan who attended the ceremony to honor their brothers in arms who fought before them. Several young men stood at attention, and family members of Army Sgt. Samuel Floberg lifted him from his wheelchair while the crowd applauded with fervor.

Floberg, a member of the North Dakota National Guard, was wounded in Afghanistan Nov. 23, 2006 during an ambush on his patrol vehicle.

“The fourth (rocket-propelled grenade) went through the door of the Humvee and took out my leg and took out the driver, Corporal Nathan Goodiron,” said Floberg, whose right leg was amputated above his knee.

“The Wall heals,” Floberg said, watching Vietnam veterans studying the engraved names on the glassy granite wall. “It’s a place that people can come back and just reflect on their heroes, their brothers and sisters.”

Veterans groups, including Veterans of Foreign Wars, Disabled American Veterans, The American Legion, Gold Star Wives, American Gold Star Mothers, Sons and Daughters in Touch, Jewish War Veterans, Paralyzed Veterans of America and Rolling Thunder, Inc. participated in the ceremony.

One of the Vietnam veterans among the hundreds of thousands of bikers riding in yesterday’s Rolling Thunder, said it took a long time for him to visit the wall.

Retired Navy field hospital corpsman Jim Enos, president of the Wilmington, N.C., Rolling Thunder chapter, said he has rumbled to the nation’s capital every year since 1996 for Vietnam veterans’ motorcycle rally on the National Mall here.

But it took him 10 years, he said, to face familiar names on the memorial wall.

“I did not visit The Wall until last year,” Enos said. “There are a lot of names on The Wall that I know, and it took me all those years.”

“First time I went to it last year, I had a good cry,” he said. “Now I can go to the Wall and I can just — I can handle it.”

Joseph M. Lawler, national capital regional director for the National Park Service, co-host of the ceremony along with the Vietnam Memorial Fund, told the audience that few visitors are untouched by the memorial’s symbolism.

“It’s somewhat ironic how often the mention of walls invokes the immediate thought of separation or barrier,” he said. “However, in this case the wall is a connector, a welcomed device, an instrument of unity.”

Retired Army Gen. Barry McCaffrey, this year’s keynote speaker, told the audience “there is no single Vietnam war experience.” He implored veterans to think back on their unique reflections.

“As we remember all these experiences — and a lot of them are pretty darn positive, and we shouldn’t forget that — friendship, trust, courage, intense humor; shared misery done so easily by youth,” he said. “But a lot of that’s clouded by those of us who could not come home, whose lives were ended so completely in combat.”

“The pain is sharp ... there’s a sense of permanent loss,” he said. “That’s why we’re here to remember, to pay honor to those memories, to learn and take comfort in their sacrifice.”

Teaching the lessons of fallen veterans’ example is the most important aspect of preserving their memory, the general said.

“There will be a final day of reckoning,” he said. “All of us here will again be reunited with these brave soldiers who we remember. The last time we saw them they were alive, frozen in time with their youth, their optimism.”

Alluding to surviving veterans’ mortality, including his own, McCaffrey said that everyone who fought in Vietnam will have a final homecoming.

“Then we’ll be able to say, ‘We have all come home together,’” he said. “God bless all of our 58,000 friends here. God bless you all.”

Maj. Gen. Gale S. Pollock, acting Army surgeon general and commander for U.S. Army Medical Command, told audience members it was a privilege to join them in reaffirming a commitment to the men and women in uniform, and to the unknown number of civilians who served during Vietnam and other conflicts.

The U.S. is implementing ways to provide all veterans with the emotional and physical care and support they have earned, Pollock said. “Let us not forget the importance of talking about these invisible wounds so they can heal and not permanently scar and interfere with our lives,” she said.

“As I look out on the crowd,” she said, “I smile because I can only imagine how proud our fallen heroes would be to see all of you here today showing your appreciation for their selfless service for our incredible nation and simply saying ‘Thanks,’ to them for going the distance.”

More than 201,000 phone cards sent to troops

Army and Air Force Exchange Service

WASHINGTON — The American public has sent more than 201,000 prepaid phone cards to service members through the Army and Air Force Exchange Service’s “Help Our Troops Call Home” program.

“Making sure our deployed troops are in a position to hear voices from home is critical to morale,” AAFES Chief of Contingency Operations Lt. Col. Steven Dean said. “By working together, the American public and AAFES, through “Help Our Troops Call Home,” have provided nearly $5 million in calls home since the program began in April 2004.”

As a military command with a retail mission, Army and Air Force Exchange Service understands how important a phone call can be to troops serving their country far from home, AAFES officials said. In fact, the command mobilized telecommunication support for troops in Operation Iraqi Freedom as early as April 15, 2003.

“We had phone services available in those early days,” Lt. Col. Dean said. “The only problem was that the complete and total lack of a preexisting telecommunications infrastructure meant the cost of a call home was 90 cents a minute.”

When AAFES opened its first phone center in Iraq on June 24, 2003, the per-minute cost for a call to America dropped to 35 cents a minute.

Less than 12 months later, the rate had dropped to 25 cents. By April 2004, AAFES had received Defense Department approval to do something the command had never been done before — sell exchange merchandise to “civilians” on behalf of troops serving in war zones halfway around the world.

Three years later, deployed troops are receiving rates as low as 19 cents a minute.

By logging on to www.aafes.org or calling (800) 527-2345, moms, uncles, neighbors and civic groups can take part in the “Help Our Troops Call Home” effort by sending any one of three Military Exchange Global Prepaid Phone cards, including a 550-minute denomination card capable of providing more than two hours of call time from any of 72 phone centers in operations Enduring and Iraqi Freedom to the United States.

Phone cards may be sent to an individual service member designated by the sender or distributed to “any service member” through the American Red Cross, Air Force Aid Society, Fisher House Foundation, Navy-Marine Corps Relief, Soldier & Family Assistance Center, and United Service Organizations.

From wooden beret to awesome display

When the Army made the black beret standard-issue headgear for all Soldiers in 2001, Laurel Irving began constructing an over-sized Army beret out of plywood “just for something to do.”

He used a saw to shape what would be the front of the beret, painted it, and planned to adorn it with a Fort Jackson crest to create a wooden replica of the cover. He just never got around to finishing the project.

Instead, he glued a Fort Jackson Distinctive Unit Insignia on the unfinished beret. The “Army of One” pin followed. As a 22-year veteran and Air Force retiree, Irving attached an Air Force insignia. His son is a naval officer and he has a friend who is a retired Marine, so those insignias soon followed.

Along with Reserve Officer Training Corps pins from schools such as the University of South Carolina, South Carolina State University and Lower Richland High School, the display, which sits in his work area at the weapons pool, has grown to approximately 200 pins — mainly Army unit crests — with several more still sitting in his desk drawer waiting to become part of the exhibit.

Irving, an electronics repairman at the weapons pool, doesn’t consider himself a collector and said this project just kind of “took off on its own.”

“People would come in as their units returned from overseas and say, ‘I don’t see my unit up there,’ and that’s how I got started,” Irving said. “One young lady came in from West Point and wanted hers up there. She took it off her cap and waited there until I glued it on the board.”

There is room on the beret-turned-bulletin board for a few more unit insignias, but Irving expects this prime piece of real estate will be occupied before it’s all said and done. Does that mean he’ll have to finish the beret, after all?

“We’ll make some kind of extension,” he said.

2007 U.S. Army Soldier Show rocks Fort Jackson

Nichole Riley
Assistant Editor

Fort Jackson hosted the 2007 United States Army Soldier Show Saturday and Sunday at the MG Robert B. Solomon Center. This year's production theme, America's Soldiers Serving Proud, reflects a Soldier's love of country, courage and commitment to family.

The 2007 U.S. Army Soldier Show is a high-energy 90-minute live musical review showcasing the talents of active duty Soldiers throughout the Army who are selected by audition. The Soldier Show production was created "for the Soldier, by the Soldier," the working motto of the Army Entertainment Division.

They are amateur artists who have a passion for music, dance and performing. They come from infantry, transportation, military police, medical, intelligence, aviation, signal and other tactical units. The show is assembled in six weeks, and then tours for six-and-a-half months. New cast members are selected each year. Aspiring Soldiers worldwide submit application packages that include videotapes, biographies, photographs and letters of recommendation from their commanders. Soldiers must have an outstanding record in their units as well as demonstrate musical abilities, movement, stage presence and versatility.

On the road, Soldiers work an average 14-hour day, seven days a week for six-and-a-half months. Totally self-contained, the cast and crew offload, load, set-up and dismantle 18 tons of equipment at each stop on the tour, including four miles of cable and 100 theatrical lights. During the tour, they will handle more than 1 million pounds of electrical, sound, stage and lighting gear. Some Soldiers have described it as their toughest duty outside of combat.

Performances demonstrate the reasons that American Soldiers serve as they do and how they display esprit de corps serving the Army. Many genres of music were represented, and individual performances reflected how Soldiers serve America proudly and unselfishly.

In 2007, the Army celebrates the 87th anniversary of the debut of the first Army Soldier Show in 1918 and the 23rd anniversary of the modern U.S. Army Soldier Show.

Ask the MEDDAC commander

Converting from TRICARE to Medicare

Q I recently received a letter in the mail explaining that when I turn 65 years old, I will no longer be eligible for TRICARE Prime benefits. Can you please provide me with specific steps on how to make my transition into the Medicare program smooth?

A There are five easy steps to ensure a smoother transition into the Medicare program:

Col. James Mundy

will need to visit the ID Card Section to update your DEERS information. Be sure to verify your address and phone number while there. You may call the Fort Jackson ID card section at 751-7731.

3. Schedule an appointment with your primary care manager. Beneficiaries enrolled in TRICARE Prime who are taking prescription medications should schedule an appointment with their Primary Care Manager before the first day of the month of their 65th birthday, while still covered by TRICARE Prime.

This will allow for the PCM to prescribe an adequate supply of medications while the beneficiary is transitioning. Those transitioning from a Military Treatment Facility to a civilian provider should plan ahead and make an appointment in advance of needing prescriptions renewed, as it often takes several weeks to schedule a new patient appointment.

4. Request copy of medical records. Once you have selected a new civilian Medicare provider, call the Correspondence Office to request a copy of your medical records for the new provider. The MACH Correspondence Office is located on the ground floor of the hospital and may be reached at 751-2471 for more information.

5. Find a Medicare doctor. Once a beneficiary is covered by Medicare Part B, he or she has the freedom to select a civilian provider by simply making an appointment with a provider who accepts Medicare. This process is very simple because most doctors in South Carolina accept Medicare. It does not matter if the provider accepts TRICARE, nor does the provider have to be in the TRICARE network.

Before scheduling an appointment, beneficiaries should confirm that the doctor's office accepts Medicare and is accepting new patients. If a doctor's office accepts Medicare, claims will automatically be forwarded to TRICARE once Medicare has processed the claim.

Finding a Medicare provider is as easy as visiting the Medicare Web site at www.medicare.gov, calling (800) 633-4227 or looking in the local phone directory. MACH's Health Benefits advisers are available if assistance is needed in finding a provider. They are located on the ground floor of MACH and can be reached by calling 751-2425 or 751-2778.

Your health: preventive measures

Jump start your wellness

Moncrief Army Community Hospital

Just like the every three month oil change and other preventive maintenance we conduct for our vehicles to ensure they are humming along smoothly, there are preventive medicine checks that need to be conducted on our bodies to ensure optimal health and wellness.

Often, these wellness checks are based upon such things as family history, age and gender. If you have already been diagnosed with a condition such as diabetes or asthma, additional periodic wellness checks are necessary to maintain good health and prevent complications associated with those conditions.

The Health Plan Employer Data and Information Set is a tool used by more than 90 percent of America's health insurance plans to measure performance on those important preventive medicine checks associated with a health care facility.

HEDIS was created by the National Committee for Quality Assurance. Results of the HEDIS tool are also used to educate patients as to what care they should be receiving and to empower the individual to take responsibility for their health by asking their health care provider to discuss these preventive medicine checks with them.

Currently, the military HEDIS goals

address: Asthma, diabetes, colo-rectal exams, mammograms and pap smears.

For example, if you are a woman between the ages of 52 and 69, have you had a mammogram within the past two years? When and where was the mammogram conducted and what were the results? When should you schedule your next mammogram?

In addition, as a woman between 21 and 64 years old, have you had a pap smear, the test for cervical cancer, in the past three years? When and where was the test completed and what were the results? How often should you schedule a pap smear?

The United States Preventive Services Task Force recommends screening for colo-rectal cancer for both men and women beginning at age 50. Anytime you meet with your health care provider in or out of Moncrief Army Community Hospital, be sure to share medical history of any of your immediate family members (parent, grandparent, brother, sister, aunt, uncle) ever having colon and/or rectal cancer. There is more than one type of screening test for colo-rectal cancer. Be sure to ask your health care provider to discuss these tests with you so you and your health care provider together can decide which test/tests are best for you.

If you have been diagnosed with diabetes or asthma, wellness checks are very specific and designed to keep you healthy. These will be discussed more in depth in future editions of the Leader.

A dedicated section of the health page of the Leader, called "Your Health: Preventive Measures," is geared toward you, the Moncrief Army Community Hospital consumer. Over the coming months this section will provide information you can discuss with your health care provider.

In addition, professional staff members from MACH will discuss preventive medicine checks with you at upcoming health fairs, in focus groups, the Retiree Council meetings, the Information Exchange Council meetings, Family Readiness Groups, the chapels and in the gyms. Look for additional information in the way of posters, brochures, flyers and booklets in the areas where you receive care at MACH, such as the Family Health Center, the Urgent Care Clinic, the Internal Medicine Clinic, the Gastrointestinal Clinic, the Imaging Center, the Gynecological Clinic and Pharmacy waiting area as well as areas on post such as the gyms, chapels, Commissary and PX.

If you are interested in having one of our professional staff members address your group on health care subjects and/or preventive medicine wellness checks, please call 751-5035/7812.

Mini-Basic Combat Training

Messengers get lesson on the message

Mike A. Glasch
Leader Staff

Those charged with spreading the Army's message now have a better understanding of what Army Strong means. For three-and-a-half days last week, 48 men and women from the different marketing companies charged with promoting the Army were put through a mini-basic combat training.

From the rigors of physical fitness training to the sense of pride and accomplishment of graduation, and many of the challenges in between, including stress and lack of sleep, they experienced a small taste of the life of an Initial Entry Training Soldier.

"They were challenged physically and mentally," said Staff Sgt. Shane Hanover, drill sergeant, Company E, 1st Battalion, 61st Infantry Regiment. "We put a lot of information out there for them in a short period of time. It was a shock to their system."

After inprocessing, being issued uniforms and TA-50 gear, and getting a weapons immersion class their first evening, the first shock came the next morning when they were awakened for physical training.

Steve Lozic, a digital assistant media planner for Universal McCann, said he expected to experience some physical and emotional hardship, but it still came as a surprise.

"Waking up at 4:30 and staying up for 20 hours at a time was very difficult on the body and the mind," he said.

For Lauren Bauwens, an outreach events coordinator for Momentum Worldwide, the lack of sleep affected her in ways she never imagined.

"You confuse your left and your right more than you think you would," she said.

In addition to the PT, they were taught some basic drill and ceremony, learned how to fire an M-16, experienced Improvised Explosive Device training, manned a security checkpoint and learned how to work in four-member teams to clear a building at the military operations on urbanized terrain site.

Liz Miklya, a media relations consultant with Weber Shandwick, said the training at the MOUT site was an eye opener.

"Even though it was just a small taste, it gave me an appreciation of the Soldiers in Iraq doing that 24-7 all day in extreme heat," she said. "It makes you admire the hard work, dedication, devotion and loyalty that Soldiers have."

The goal of the mini-BCT was to give the participants a hands-on experience of what it's like to make the transformation from civilian to Soldier so that they can better tell the Army story.

Hanover said mission was accomplished.

"I think they understand the Army message better," he said. "You can't tell somebody about something you've never done or lived. They'll be able to put the message out there a bit more clearly."

Ditto for Bauwens.

"It helps that now we can see into the life of what a Soldier does," Bauwens said. "It's not just all war and guns and fighting. It's discipline. You turn into a whole new person, get a new sense of character. When prospects are talking to recruiters, now we can listen in and interject a little bit."

Miklya put it in simpler terms.

"Now when I explain 'Army Strong,' I really know what it means," she said.

The greatness of loving-kindness

Chaplain (Maj.) Scott M. Bullock
2nd Bn., 39th Inf. Reg.

I make the best coffee. At least I’ve convinced myself I do. Just give me a French press with Gevalia traditional roast, real half and half cream and pure sugar. It’s smooth and mild not bitter or caustic.

Smooth and mild is the biblical meaning behind kindness. I figured this out from my other love besides coffee — great preaching.

Life-changing preaching requires serious Bible study of words we live by. The key word for kindness in the New Testament refers to moral goodness that makes a person friendly and loving toward others. This goodness is gentle and selfless; the opposite of harsh and selfish.

God leads the way in showing kindness. He acts as a friend even to his enemies, culminating in Christ’s death as the full extent of his kindness (Ephesians 2:7).

In the Old Testament, where it’s all about relationships, kindness means loving-loyalty. You were kind in ancient times by faithfully behaving and speaking in a loving, loyal manner. My favorite verse teaching the importance of kindness is 1 Corinthians 13:4.

The Apostle Paul defines love by what it is: both patient and kind. When you show kindness you show love.

Armed with these eternal truths, we must be kind to each other today. Pray that God gives you more opportunity to show kindness. I believe a genuine person of faith and hope can’t help but live out kindness. It fills their life and springs forth in offering words of thanks, maintaining a calm attitude or giving an unexpected gift. If we commit to this, then marriages will thrive, families will find reconciliation and old friendships will rekindle.

Say a kind word and give an unexpected favor today and you will prove smooth, mild and gentle; even more than my best cup of coffee.

Cases of the Week

The Provost Marshal Office was contacted by a Soldier reporting a Hit and Run in the parking lot of Building 2200. The investigation revealed that an unknown vehicle struck the Soldier’s vehicle, which was left unattended, causing a dent and minor scratches in the driver’s side front fender.

The Military Police were notified by The Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms of a Soldier wanted on Weapons Related Charges and Filing a False Official Statement. After verification of the warrant, the Soldier was apprehended, transported to the station, processed and turned over to U.S. marshals.

A Soldier reported a Larceny of Private Property after he discovered that someone removed two metal chairs from his government quarters. A search of the area met with negative results.

The MPs were contacted about a Driving under the Influence incident near Gate 2 after a civilian attempted to drive on the installation while under the influence of alcohol. The civilian failed several Field Sobriety Tests. He was transported to the station, where he refused to provide a breath sample. The subject was charged, his vehicle, which was later released to a second party, was towed to an off-post facility.

Fire Chief Tip of the Week

The Fire Prevention Office reminds family housing residents to test and inspect monthly smoke detectors, carbon monoxide detectors and stove top fire suppression systems.

- a. To test the detectors, hold in the test button until the alarm sounds.
- b. To inspect the hood suppression system, verify that the needle on the gauge is in the green, the pin is not in the extinguisher and that there are no obstructions around the cables and pulleys.

If the alarm does not sound, or if there is a problem with the suppression system, notify housing maintenance immediately. Call housing maintenance (Ameritech) at 787-6416 for replacement or repair of defective devices. For questions, call the fire prevention office at 751-1610/5239.

All-Army volleyball teams reunite in championship

Tim Hipps

Army News Service

WEST POINT, N.Y. — Although All-Air Force squads won both team titles, the Soldier-athletes who participated in the 2007 Armed Forces Volleyball Championships May 8-12 were proud of their month spent in the Catskills focusing on a game they love.

“I’ve seen teams that take three months to actually get it together in college,” said Spc. Sarah “Big Red” Lusk, a military policewoman stationed at Fort Leonard Wood, Mo. “For a team to get together like this in three weeks and play so amazingly and run the offense so effectively, we’re playing way faster than I ever thought we would.”

Lusk, a 6-foot-2-inch middle hitter, was a four-year volleyball starter for Colorado State University-Pueblo.

“The Army always talks about teamwork and communication,” said Spc. Michael Bertorello. “This really is all of the Army values they want in wartime personified. It’s one team, one fight. It’s not six guys out there, and it’s not three guys on the bench looking at you, it’s everybody communicating and moving as one.

“A lot of pride, if you had to sum it up in one word,” he said of representing the Army in the Armed Forces Championships. “Anytime you can put the name of an organization on your back and play volleyball, your chest swells out a little bit, you stand a little bit taller, and you know that a lot more is expected out of you.”

Spc. Bryan Pieschel, the All-Army men’s other Armed Forces All-Tournament selection, resigned as head volleyball coach at Quincy University in Illinois to enlist.

“My family and friends were shocked to say the least,” said Pieschel, 29, an All-Army setter/assistant coach from Fort Leonard Wood. “I joined to go to Iraq, and I told my family that from the get-go. I’d always thought it was something every American should do.”

As fortunate as he felt to represent the Army in the Armed Forces Championships, Pieschel said nothing he’s accomplished in volleyball can compare with serving in Iraq.

“It was the hardest year of my life, but I don’t regret it,” he said. “It was the most important thing I have ever done in my life — just being there as a medic for my fellow Soldiers and their families.”

For seven other Soldiers, the All-Army volleyball training camp and Armed Forces tournament doubled as a month-long homecoming at their alma mater.

“In the midst of playing volleyball, I’m having so much fun that I don’t want it to stop,” said 1st Lt. Jennifer Wynn of Fort Campbell, Ky., who played four seasons of volleyball here for the Black Knights and spent most of 2006 deployed in Ramadi, Iraq. “We’re just having way too much fun.”

First Lt. Jennifer Combs of Camp Humphreys, Korea, and 2nd Lt. Abby Casciato of Fort Leonard Wood also played volleyball for the Black Knights, as did

Fort Campbell’s 2nd Lt. Jennifer Rayburn, who concentrated more on track and the triathlon while a cadet.

“It’s an honor not only playing All-Army volleyball, but coming back to the academy has been a totally different experience this time around,” said Rayburn, who is scheduled to deploy to Baghdad next year. “I’m looking forward to deploying because it’s almost like a rite of passage now in the Army. You want to go serve along with everyone who’s already over there. You don’t want to be the one who’s left behind.”

On the men’s side, 1st Lt. Noah Smith of Fort Bliss, Texas; 1st Lt. Justin McFarlin of Fort Bragg, N.C.; and Capt. Matthew Fix of Fort Campbell also played for the U.S. Military Academy.

“This is the first time I’ve played volleyball since I graduated in 2005,” McFarlin said. “The biggest thing was just getting my legs back because out in the big Army it’s all run, run, run — so I’ve lost a lot of my vertical [leap] that I’ve been trying to get back since I’ve been here.”

Although the players’ timing and jumping ability may have left something to be desired, there was no lack of pride on the court.

“It was intense because we were in two-a-days almost every day for three weeks,” Smith said. “It takes a lot out of you. You spend most of your time playing volleyball. Then you eat, rest and play some more volleyball.

“I can’t say it’s a bad thing,” he concluded. “It’s been a lot of fun and I consider myself lucky to do this.”

Post soccer team has bad end to good season

Fort Jackson Sports Office

The Fort Jackson post soccer team ended an amazing run last week with a disappointing loss in the finals of their division in The Plex Indoor Soccer League. Playing in their second season this year, the team improved upon a 3-5 record to go undefeated in the regular season with five wins and an unprecedented three ties.

“Our tenacity kept us in every game. Whatever we lacked in skill, we made up with teamwork and a little ‘Army Strong’ intestinal fortitude,” said team captain Shawn Dillon from the 2nd Battalion, 39th Infantry Regiment. “We really gelled as a team after the first session. None of us really knew each other at the start, but by our second session, we were coming back from big deficits to get the ties — that’s really what put us in first place going into the playoffs.”

After a strong showing throughout the season, Fort Jackson won a squeaker 3-2 in the semifinals to go on to the final showdown ... literally. The matchup against rival Harper’s Team was about as even as it gets — the first two matchups ended with a tie and a one goal victory for Fort Jackson. The showdown took place May 20 on “Championship Night” at The Plex Indoor Sports Center in Columbia.

The first half of play ended with Fort Jackson down 4-2. Keeping with tradition, the team pulled out in the final few minutes, tying the game up at 5-5.

After a back and forth five minute overtime period, awing the fans with a remarkable game, the referee signaled the end of play and told the team captains to pick three shooters for a penalty shootout as the final tie-breaker.

“I thought we would win the shootout, because our keeper, (Duane Herbert of HHC, USAG) is the best in the league and I knew he would stop at least one of their players,” Dillon said.

He did, but to no avail, as two out of three Jackson shooters missed the mark. Ron Lamison, of USAREC, scored the sole shootout goal, while two of three players scored for Harper’s, ending the shootout 2-1.

Even non-partisan staff members were impressed, as one referee expressed, “that’s the best game I’ve ever seen here at the Plex, you guys played great!”

“It’s tough to put a team of Soldiers together, each year, who do not really know each others skills. They played against teams that have been together for years, so even making it to the finals is an accolade in itself,” said Cindi Keene, post sports coordinator. “They really gelled and got it together.”
